WHITEPAPER

BACKGROUND OF MEMECOIN

A meme coin is a cryptocurrency that has as its foundation meme culture or any other amusing or lighthearted element. When compared to larger, more well-known cryptocurrencies like Bitcoin (BTC) and Ethereum (ETH), its volatility is comparatively significant. This is due to the fact that meme currencies are also frequently referred to as "community tokens" because they are mostly driven by the community.
Social media and the mood of holders frequently impact price changes. Memes may see significant market volatility as a result, but holders may also be presented with special chances not found in other financial markets.
During the global COVID19 pandemic in 2020, the cryptocurrency market initially crashed but later exploded as retail investors flocked to digital assets such as Bitcoin (BTC) and Ether (ETH) as a hedge against inflation.
